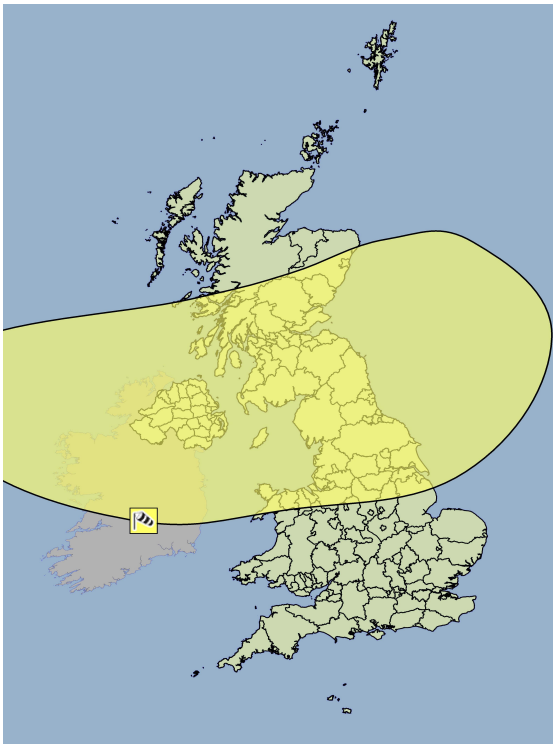
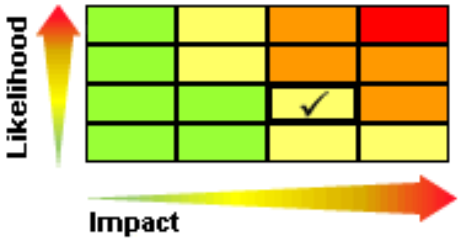
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another very vigorous depression is likely to develop across the Atlantic in conjunction with the very strong jet stream, passing to the north of Scotland on Saturday. This depression will probably be a larger system than Friday's and the area at risk from disruptive winds may well be larger, with northern England and north Wales also at risk.

There remains some uncertainty in the extent of the disruptive conditions so the public should monitor the website for updates which are likely in the coming days.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Wind

Valid from 00:05 on Sat, 10th Jan 2015 until 18:00 on Sat, 10th Jan 2015

Another very vigorous depression is likely to run quickly eastwards, passing to the north of Scotland on Saturday. This is expected to bring very strong westerly winds to many northern and central parts of the UK on Saturday. Gusts of 60-70 mph are likely quite widely. The winds should gradually ease from the west later in the day.

The public should be aware that that disruption to transport and possibly power supplies could occur.
